SERVICE STANDARDS

- Orders sent remotely are supplied against the reference number indicated on the order form. The best way to avoid errors is to make an appointment to visit Search Engine to examine the drawings in person.
- Microfilm aperture cards are supplied in TIFF format. Every effort is made to ensure that the scan is legible, but the quality of reproduction is dependent upon the quality of the microfilm. In general, copies produced from the original drawing (where available) are of a higher standard.
- Prints can only be supplied at the standard paper sizes above. Where possible these will include the scale-marker placed next to the drawing when it was microfilmed. However, for peace of mind we recommend obtaining digital scans and printing your drawings locally. Requests to reprint drawings may incur additional charges.
- Copies of drawings are normally despatched within 4-6 weeks from receipt of your order. Please allow extra time if your order includes prints size A2 and above.
- Orders will not be processed unless the copyright declaration is completed, and payment has been received.

Frequently Asked Questions

What happens next?

If you have provided an email address, we will contact you within the first week to acknowledge receipt and provide you with an order number. We will then retrieve the items you have requested copies of and check their condition. Our orders are processed in batches, so this will usually take place within 1-4 weeks of receiving your order. If we find anything unexpected which will affect the cost of your order, we will contact you at this point to discuss this. If we will need to charge you more than you were expecting, we will not process any payment for your order until we have obtained your permission. Payments are usually taken after this has been completed and if necessary, your items will then be sent to our external partners for copying. We endeavour to despatch orders within 6 weeks of receipt but may take a bit longer for large requests or where special handling is required.
